Agencies of this description are very much needed, to call the attention of strangers to our section, which, for natural advantages of soil and climate, water power and mineral resources, is surpassed by no other portion of the South, and which offers the finest field for investment that was ever presented to those who wish to engage in farming, manufacturing, mining, or speculation. In short, I believe we have the finest country in the United States, and it will be the object of the Dan River Land Agency to bring its attractions prominently before the world. Persons residing in this portion of Virginia and North Carolina, will find it to their advantage to put their lands under my control. stood upon [redacted] was a high[redacted] me Milanese; for long had the battle raged, and desperate, between the triple operatic powers of Rome, Naples, and Milan, ere the palm of victory had been awarded to the latter.

My professional duties had detained me late, (I was a young, struggling M. D. in Milan at the time;) and I entered the theatre but as the air shook with the wondrous applause elicited by Sodieg's rendering of "Ah! non credea," in the Sonnambula. I was especially disappointed to have missed that aria—to me, the gem of the entire opera. But who could deem himself ill-used, if in time for the Gidngr? So, mentally thankful it was no worse, I made my way to my seat—one, fortunately, very near the stage; and had taken it, and was bowing to some English friends seated in the boxes adjacent, ere the wild tumult of applause had ceased to deafen my ears, or the floral tributes to be enthusiastically showered at the lady's feet.

One wreath, remarkable for its singular beauty, I remember, composed of some deftly-woven, strange, red exotics, caught my gaze as I turned toward the stage, in the act of its descent.. An instant more, it caught my hand as well; for, unintentionally, in the act of turning, hat in hand, the latter struck it, thereby swerving it from its original destination, directly into my own grasp. A moment more, I stood the centre of attraction in my immediate sphere, bending forward with what grace I might, offering it to Sontag. The kindly, gracious smile with which she received it will probably dwell in my memrory as long as aught earthly. Verily, its remembrance thrills me with a strange sense of pleasure, even upon a fifty years' recall.

The graceful figure, in its slender beauty, yet bent before me, the crimson wreath lightly resting against her breast, when a second one, accurately dropped from above, literally crowned Amina as she stood. It was a deft trick, and one which immediately called forth the delighted appreciation of the audience.

The building absolutely rocked with the vibration caused by the second burst of sudden ecstatic acclamation.

One odd feature of the incident immediately struck me, namely, that the second wreath on the prima donna's head was an exact duplicate of the blood-red crown upon her bosom, and which I had presented not an instant before. I had scarcely had time to note this coincidence, and the lady, casting her burned eyes appreciatively in my direction, was in the act of bowing a second graceful obeisance to the compliment-wreath, raising it as she did so to her lips, when the beautiful face paled suddenly, the limbs contracted sharply, and she fell writhing in convulsions, almost into the very foot-lights at my feet.

In an hour the mystery was out, and all Milan knew that both wreaths were poisoned! To this day, the music-mad Milanese remember the dreary horror of that night. A week later, all Europe learned it; and at this day it is the property of the world. The facts were these: A jealous rival, distanced alike in love as fame by the peerless favorite, interpolated the role of the Borgia into the opera. Providentially, with partial success.

A week later, Sontag; perfectly recovered, sang at the San Carlo: and a month had barely elapsed ere the echoes of La Scala again awoke to her divine forgiveness.

A sudden case of suicide called me from my bed, immediately upon my retirement, the night of the "Floral Murder," as we of Milan dubbed the abortive catastrophe. My patient was a young and beautiful woman—a singer—one of Milan's favorites prior to the arrival of the present idol. Its cause, a dual one—envy and malice, rooted in maddening jealousy.

By a marvelous interposition, death was not the immediate result; my patient lingered on for hours; nay days—three and even four, in number—actually passed in life for a woman literally stabbed through the heart!

I had, of course, forbidden the slightest possible excitement. Life, of course, was utterly hopeless; but life should be saved as long, I determined, as human skill could fan the vital spark. All Milan, professional, was in attendance; but I, having received the earliest call, was considered the ruling medical authority. It was on the afternoon of the fourth day, and I was hurrying from other calls back into this wondrous patient's room, when I was arrested by such strains of entrancing melody, that with my hand upon the door knob, in the act of [redacted] rying on[redacted], I paused to listen.

"Oh! it is the glorious S[redacted]g," was [redacted] first thought.

A friend passing at the moment, (for I lodged in the same hotel with both prima donnas,) drawn from his sofa like myself into the corridor by the concord of these wondrous sweet sounds, nodded back appreciation, recognition.

"Of course, it is Sontag?" I said.

"No; that is the strangest part of it. Sienora Sontag is listening with the rest, utterly entranced, within the corridor."

"What!" I amazedly answered—and with the word sprang into the passage. Once out there, one glance told me all; the crowd were gathered around the door of my dying patient's room, and it was from that door that this world of melody was pouring. In an instant I was beside her, about to forcibly prevent the certain death, if possible; but I saw that I was already too late. A strange smile lit up her wasted face, and the large eyes kindled into an unearthly transient glare of life as they met mine; then pointing to a tiny envelope upon the table beside her, with one loud, triumphant burst of inexpressibly sad melody, she raised herself suddenly to her full height in bed, stretched forth her arms wildly, and, with a choking, gurgling rattle of the throat, fell forward upon her face, literally deluged in her own life blood.

The note, directed simply to me, contained these words, in a slender, Italian hand:

"Doctor, you say I cannot live—and I know it. My prayer is for one more song in life—and that she may hear it. I pay the price knowingly—and only two willingly—Life for a single song!"

She had verily paid it. An examination of the poor girl's effects showed her to have died in extreme poverty. She might have been wealthy in former times; but her recklessness and sad extravagance had long since passed into a proverb among those who knew her best.

That evening, while watching in the dim twilight of the room wherein she lay, a tall figure of a woman, shrouded to the temples, glided noiselessly beside me. Without a word, I felt a purse pressed into my hand, and in an instant after the mystery vanished as noiseless as a shadow into the echoes of the darkened corridor. A slip of paper was twisted in tremulous handwriting about it, on which was written simply: "In masses, Signor, for her soul."

It needed not the further glance given by me in my eagerness into the hurried eyes of the donor as she tendered it. The delicate nobility of the action spoke with its own power akin to the many other noble deeds which graced the life of Henrietta Sontag.

TENNESSEE WONDERS.

We are glad we don't live in Tennessee. On the 4th of July, the Memphis Post says, that in Campbell County during a severe thunder storm, and while it was at its height, the Gap was suddenly filled with countless, numbers of snakes, which were seen falling for nearly ten minutes. They were of the common ringed species and measured from five inches to two feet in length. They were all dead, being killed it is supposed, by the fall.

This is a hard story; but the Nashville Press beats it, as follows:

"The most curious phenomenon which we we have heard of occurred out in Cheatham county on Wednesday last. The day, it will be remembered, was remarkably hot, so that most people in that county had to seek the shade about noon. At this hour, on the farm of Ed. Sharp, five miles from Ashland, a sort of whirlwind came along over the neighboring woods, taking up small branches and leaves of trees and burning them in a sort of a flaming cylinder that traveled at the rate of about five miles an hour, and developing in size as it traveled. It passed directly over the spot where a team of horses were feeding and singed their manes and tails up to the roots, it then swept towards the house, taking a stack of hay in its course, which it set on fire. It seemed to increase in heat as it went, and by the time it reached the house it immediately fired the shingles from end to end of the building, so that in ten minutes the whole dwelling was wrapped in flames. The tall column of travelling caloric then continued its course over a wheat field that had been recently cradled, setting fire to all the stacks which happened to be in its course. Passing from the field, its [redacted] over a stretch of woods which reached to the river. The green leaves on the trees were crisped to a cinder for a breadth of twenty yards, in a straight line to Cumberland. When the "pillar of fire" reached the water it sudden[redacted]

AN ADROIT SELL.

One day a gentleman called at the store of Mr. Ralph Hardman with a violin-box under his arm. He purchased a neck-tie, for which he paid fifty cents, and then asked permission to leave his box while he did a few errands down town. Old Hardman—a dealer in new and second-hand clothing—had no objection.

"It is a violin," said the gentleman, "which I prize very highly. It was given me by an Italian who died at my father's house. I beg you will be careful of it, sir."

Mr. Hardman promised, and the owner of the precious violin departed.

Towards noon, while the old clothing dealer was very deeply engaged in the work of selling a suit of shoddy for bang-up Prussian Tricott, a stranger entered the store—a remarkably well-dressed man, with a distinguished look. The violin-box was in sight upon the shelf, and as no one was near to prevent, the new-comer slipped around and opened the box and took out the instrument—a very dark-hued and an ancient-looking one.

"Hallo?" cried Hardman, when he heard the sound of the violin. "What for you touch dat, eh?"

The stranger explained that he was a professor—that he was a leader of an orchestra—and that he could never see a violin without trying it. And then he drew the bow across the strings, playing a few passages of a fine old German waltz.

"My soul!" he cried, after he had run his fingers over the instrument awhile, "this is the best violin I ever saw! There is not a better in the city—a perfect, genuine old Cremona! I will give you a hundred dollars for it."

Hardman said it was not his.

"I will give you a hundred and fifty—two hunred."

Mr. Hardman was forced to explain how the violin came to be left in his store.

The stranger had taken out his pocket-book, and drawn forth two one hundred dollar bank notes. He put them back, remarking:

"I must have the violin if money wil buy it. When the owner returns, you will ask him to meet me here at 6 o'clock. If he cannot do that, tell him to call at the office of the treasurer of the Academy of Music, and inquire for the director of the orchestra. Will you do it?"

Hardman said he would.

"But suggested the stranger, "you need not tell the man what I have said about his violin, nor what I have offered, because he may have no idea of what a treasure he possesses. You will be careful and circumspect."

The stranger went away, and Ralph Hardman reflected. In the course of an hour the owner of the violin returned and asked for his box. But the shoddy man had been captivated by the golden bait.

What would the gentleman sell his violin for.

At first the gentleman would not listen to the proposition; but after a deal of talk he confessed that he himself was not a professor, and could not well afford to keep such a valuable instrument.

He would sell it for one hundred and seventy-five dollars—not a penny less.

Ralph Hardman paid the money, and became the legal possessor of the violin, ready to take anywhere from three hundred to five hundred dollars from the director of the orchestra, as he might be able.

But the director did not come. At the end of a week Hardman carried the violin to a professional friend and asked him what was its real value. His friend examined it and said.

"Two dollars and a half without the box."

Ralph Hardman was strongly of the opinion that the gentleman who left the violin in his care was a swindler, and that the director was a partner in the business, and that, together, they had made him their victim. That night shoddy was marked up ten per cent.

HUNTING PARTY.—A friend informs us that he was a ta[redacted] meeting of a party of gentlemen in Luenburg county, who, it appears, during [redacted] destruction to the crows and [redacted] gentleman, by last twelve months. An [redacted] name of Ben Smith, [redacted]venty years old, exhibited 225 crow bills and mole snouts, as his years work. He took the premium. The whole party paraded between 5,000 and 6,000 in all.

AHEAD.

There is no organized political organization in the United States. The Radical party is already split into so many wings that there is very little of body left it, and what there is holds nothing but vomit—its stomach surcharged with the filthy spoils on which it has been feasting.

The Democratic party is fast losing its name, owing to its amalgamation with so many different party colored factions.

So there is not sufficient strength in any one party to give even dignity to the acts of its administration. Of course in such a crisis every man is for picking his own Moses to lead him to the haven of peace. Some ku-klux; some join the league; while many still cling to the "broken vase" of other days and hope for the coming again of the old fashion Law.

But Progress points ahead. No turning back. Ahead there may be even the blackness of night to pass through; but ahead we are marching. And marching too like demoralized squads. Staring at the signs in the heavens and on earth; feeling something is ahead—don't know what—don't care what. Still on we whirl. Each new day turns up some monstrous crime or singular happening that make us wall the whites of our eyes—and then rush on in the forward movement.

But amid this confused mass of jumbling and jabbering dunces, wily knaves, and fierce, untamed mankind—stand a chosen few—solid in the christian faith and unbending to the storm that bows the rest of us poor mortals as shaken reeds. These men are stil untainted by the degeneracy of the times. They are hard working. They are content with a little. Of a little they give a little to the poor. They are no vain disputers given to a strife of words. They have no loaf of office between their jaws. They have no phosphorus reputation that shines only in the night time like the bad penny of a burglar. But modest and quiet they read the "old family Bible" every night and morning and ask God to go with them through the burdens of the day.

These are the men to whom promotion will yet come as it went to Cincinnattus at his plow. For the character of this government is fast going to rot. Paper collars and kid gloves and wine money and gawks and stupes and debauched villains have well nigh worn its ermined robes to a frizzle. And the time is coming when men of unblemished character and sober intelligence will be forced from their now seemingly obscure and private stations in life to lift this country from the mire of corruption into which it has fallen. The country only needs to fall a little lower; the country only needs a few more worthless men to be placed in office—before you hear the crack of her timbers and the shrieks of her motley crew calling upon good men and true to come and save the ship of State!

JOE.

A friend from Morganton informs us that during court week in that place Joe Turner made a speech that Vance declared he couldn't improve on. The Court had hardly any hearers at all while he was talking. Joe is hard to head. Many years ago he had a case at Roxboro. A fellow was indicted for committing some offence against the peace and dignity of that serene village "on Main street." Joe wanted to know where and what Main street was? A host of witnesses was called but they [illegible] more they didn't know adzackly whar it commenced or whar it ended. So the thing fell through and Joe's man [illegible]

Phillip F. [illegible], a trader in to[illegible] while blasphemously cursing and ravi[illegible] his team was struck dead in the twinkle of an eye by the hand of the Almighty. It happened in Watauga county in this State. Let the swearer take care.

THE PEABODY BALL.

These bachelor correspondents of the Richmond Press are "doing up" in a handsome style the dear girls who appeared at the Peabody Ball which came off at the White Sulphur Springs a few days since. We notice that old Danville stands at the head of the list. Miss JANIE SUTHERLIN of that town has received the largest boquet of compliment the FUROR POETICUS of these correspondents culled. Miss Janie was attired in a dress of blue and crimson satin, sparkling with diamonds and other jewelry. She was the Light of the Harem and is declared to have been as brilliant as the Orient she personnated.

☞Our esteemed Clerk, George Laws is off again for Catawba Springs. This gentleman has lately made some of the very best appointments of Magistrates that could be had in the county. He selected without without regard to friend or foe—looking only to merit and capability. We like to record such rare instances.

RICHMOND & DANVILLE ROAD.

We are glad to notice the heavy shipments of grain now being made over this road. We venture to assert that no road in the United States has a more efficient and intelligent corps of officers, from its agents up to the President. It is seldom the case any freight is ever injured or lost on this road. And what few instances we can call to mind—full damage was in every case made in clean money to the owner.

Attorney General Hoar has decided that Gen. Canby shall enforce the test oath in Virginia.

Pennington—the ice-cool lemonade editor of what was once known as the Raleigh Progress—is now President of the Eufala and Opelika Railroad in Alabama.

The papers in Virginia are complaining of the drought. In Caroline county an editor who traveled twenty miles by one route and twenty two miles by another says he saw fifty acre fields that wouldn't average a bushel of corn to the acre. In the northern part of Ohio as well as in Indiana, Illinois and portions of Maryland the corn crop is said to be a failure. In Iowa, Kansas, Texas and Kentucky there has fallen a plenty of rain and a large corn crop will be made.

TAKE CARE.

The drought is upon us. There is going to be a scarcity of corn stuffs. We beg our farmers as they hope for heaven in the other world to guard against speculators. Don't sell to any man whose object it is to speculate in bread stuffs. You can tell your man. If he is a stranger—that's what he is after. If your own countyman—you know him—you can judge what he is after God knows there are enough poverty pinched cries riding the blast now. Have regard for them or the meat you swallow will yet turn to the poison of asps within you.

We have formed a party of our own to be called The-Don't Know-What-To-Bees. The first plank in our platform is a resolution sympathizing with Gen. Grant over the loss of his favorite riding mare (Ada.)

A TRUE SNAKE STORY.—On the Fourth of July last one of Wardwell's "pets," while on a little excursion into the country, came upon a large moccasin snake, which he succeeded in capturing. He gave it to one of the guards, who caged the reptile and tried to domesticate it. Five weeks have elapsed, and during that time the snake, although apparently in first-rate health, has not taken a morsel of food of any kind. She has, however, within a few days past, astonished her keeper by giving birth to forty two young ones, which are now alive and squirming. The youngsters are as lively as crickets, and may occasionally be seen in squads of a dozen or so at a time going down the throat of the fond "parient," either as a refuge from danger, or perhaps to take their meals in some incomprehensible manner.

The gentleman having this happy family in charge has been at a loss to know what to feed them with, and has not as yet found anything that they relish. A day or two ago a live frog was put into the cage, and it was hard to tell whether frog or snake was the more frightened. A mouse was then put in, but this venture was still more unsuccessful, for the mouse created a panic among the little ones by devouring one of their number, notwithstanding the victim was eight inches long and armed with the [illegible] of venom pointed fangs.—Rich-

Death.

J. A. McDade died at his residence near Cedar Grove on Tuesday morning at two o'clock. Mr. McDade had just been elected Magistrate, and was one of the most useful and highly esteemed citizens in his section. The death of Mr. McDade was caused by a bone—hog's rib about an inch long—that he swallowed at some time in the past. We learn that Mr. McDade remembered nothing of it—but a lady friend says it was done at her house about six months ago and that he complained of it at the time. About two weeks since the bone first began to give him trouble. It had passed through his bowels and was extracted by Dr. Wilson of that neighborhood. This caused Erysipelas in the bowels from which he died.

Local Department.

The Eclipse at Lensburg.

From a correspondent.

As the sun was in eclipse the other evening there semed to be a general settling up among some of the negroes for their rascality. Just listen if you please:

O de Josyfat I is a bad nigger shonuf. I jes wants to tell all about Tom Currie's wheat what was stole. Yes, I got one of Drewry Burton's sheep, yes, I did. I stole that flour outen Jim Richmond's mill. I did steal Brock Holden's corn. Yes, I stole Tom Oakley's spotted pig. Yes, my boys brought home three of Tom Currie's sheep on our old horse. O de 'mazin pitty I knows I'se bad. Yes, I does b'long't'de league 'an I'm sorry for it. Yes, I did steal Speck Thaxton's corn but I'm sorry for it. O it's a gittin mity dark; far-you-well dis nigger gwine to roost.

Who Told the News.

It may not be known when where and how Jefferson Davis heard of the surrender of Gen. Lee. On Saturday, the 7th of April, 1865—the Commandant of the Post at Danville sent for Capt. W. P. Graves of that place and told him that Mr. Davis wished him to bear despatches to Gen Lee's army. Capt. G. was soon in the saddle and speeding his way towards the direction of our army. Many a stout heart as it found itself intercepted at every point by the enemy would have turned back, but with his usual dash the Captain flanked every yankee outpost and reached our lines just as Gen. Lee was surrendering his army. He immediately remounted and dashed for Danville where he arrived on Monday about 2 P. M.

THE INTERVIEW.

The President had his quarters in a dwelling house on Wilson street—an old brick building known as "the Benedick Place." To this house Capt. G. repaired as soon as he reached Danville. Mr. Davis was at dinner. But he left the table and awaited Capt. G. in his reception room. As the Captain told the sad news Mr. Davis bowed his head on both his hands and heard him through without uttering a word. He was thinking—maybe praying. Then raising his head he said, "Captain, you must come in and have some dinner." This—we are told by Capt. G., was all that was said.

Ku Klux Sensation at Chapel Hill.

From our special correspondent.

For sometime past this place has been exceedingly dull. The boys concluded to get up a little fun sorter ku klux like. So a number of blood and thunder letters were sent about to sensationists in the town. The mythical papers intimated that the Klan would meet at the town pump on the night of the 15th at 11.30 P. M. The darkies caught the infection and were on hand in formidable numbers. A crowd of sable patriots surrounded the town pump and it was in eclipse the whole night. "But de kew klux were not daze."

REMOVED.

The Assessor's Office for this district, with all its paraphernalia, has been moved from this place to Raleigh; Gen. Wilie D Jones, Assessor, vice Solomon Pool resigned.

An Outrage.

We have been reliably informed that on Wednesday before the Township Elections in this county—the Flat River League held a meeting at the house of a negro man named Peter Leathers who lives on the Oxford road about 8 miles from here. A daughter of Mr. James Carrington in going along that road was halted by a negro guard and told she could not pass. She went back home and her old father returned with her. The "guard" halted them both and told them "dat line was de dead line." And this old man and his daughter were not allowed to pass. Our informant stated it was the general opinion that, a white man had put the negroes up to this thing for fear lest he might be recognized in the League by the passers by. It is our duty to place such outrages upon record that the eyes of the functionaries may not sweetly slumber upon a volcano of barbaric ignorance and wild and excited prejudice.

Not Elected.

Frank Whitted—the colored man in this place who was thought to have been elected Magistrate—did not receive a majority of the votes cast in this township by nine. So the Commissioners threw him out and our most excellent Clerk made a capital appointment in his stead. Frank run down to Raleigh to complain to Governor Holden about it, but the Governor told him that the Commissioners had only acted in obedience to the Law and he should most assuredly support them in it. Exit Frank.

Leasburg.

From our special correspondent.

The Factory of R. P. Hancock has been closed again by Government officers. Glorious government.

A STRANGE COINCIDENCE.

The amiable wife of William Taylor—merchant of Leasburg—died of Typhoid fever on Wednesday the 11th instant. Ten years ago his former wife died the same month; the same day; and just about the same hour.

Company Shops

From Our Special Correspondent.

Mr. Fox keeps a first class hotel at the Shops.

The Company are selling lots around the Shops.

Base Ball is played every evening by the employees of the Shops.

A revival of religion is going on. Some few have professed.

A gentleman come to preaching at the Shops last Thursday and tied his horse out. He got the benefit of a good sermon, but a thief got his horse.

The Schedule of the N. C. Rail Road will probably be changed next month. So that parties will have breakfast and supper at the Shops.

The N. C. C. R Road is kept in splendid order. Mr. Albert Johnson—superintendent of the road—is a splendid railroad man—accommodating, pleasant and in every way suited for his business.

Read.

We ask attention to the Tobacco Sales of Hollands Warehouse in Danville. A friend writes us that prices for the weed are "booming." Now is the time to take it to market if this be the case. Guard against "drummers" for a warehouse. Drumming has "played out." And do you "spooney" at the first chap that drums you for a tobacco house.

Paid.

There was a whole host of colored suffragans at Miles' precinct who had never listed any taxes. One has since given in to the amount of six cents! As a friend remarks he has "entered up and passed the buck." Who next?

A young preacher carried three new scholars into a Sunday-school, where they were asked their names:

"What is your name?"

"Dan," replied the first one.

"Oh, no; your name is Daniel, say it now.

"Daniel."

"Yes; well Daniel, take your seat."

"And what is your name?" was asked of number two.

"Sam," said he."

"Oh, dear, no; it is Samuel; sit down Samuel. And now let us hear what your name is, my bright little fellow?" said he, turning to the third.

With a grin of self-satisfaction, the young fellow replied:

"Jimuel, be jabers."

Sam., did—did (hic) see anything of my wife?

I have not the honor of knowing your wife, sir.

Don't apologize, Sam, don't apo-apo—hic!—logize. It—it's no honor whatever. Didn't see her?

Farm Yard Scraps.

SORE BACKS ON HORSES.

A strong horse with a sore back is frequently shorn of half his strength. A sore back is usually the result of a miserable harness. Yet, in many instances, the backband is made two short, or is buckled up too tight, so that the traces at the backband are raised above a direct line from the hames to the whiffle tree. When this is the case, the backband, when the horse draws, is pressed down with force on the back; and unless the pad is soft, or the harness be made with a patent back, a wound will be made which will be difficult to heal, so long as the harness that made the wound is employed on the animal. When a horse has a sore back, and it seems necessary to keep him in the harness, let the backband be removed entirely; or let it be lengthened, and fastened a few inches back of the wound.

It will be very easy to determine whether a backband is liable to injure the animal's back by observing, when he draws, whether the portion of the harness directly above the back is drawn down forcibly or is lifted clear from the back. A wound on the back of the horse is frequently irritated so long by the rough harness that it becomes almost incurable. A fresh wound, if not kept bleeding by the rubbing of the harness, will heal in two or three weeks in warm weather, without any other medicines than soap suds. But an old wound that has tried to heal after the scab has been rubbed off several times requires an application of burnt alum, pulverized, to cleanse it of the "proud flesh." The best remedy is a preventive. The driver is the one on whom the blame should rest, for allowing a horse to have a sore back. If the harness is not right, let it be made right before a horse is required to work in it. It is barbarous to work an animal in a harness that will gall the flesh. Better cut an old collar and harness into fragments, and bury the pieces beneath a grape vine, than to continue to use such fixtures as will wound a faithful beast of burden. Fothermore, when a sore back has been allowed to ulcerate, frequently discharging ichorus matter, one of the most efficacious remedies is to bathe the wound for two successive hours in strong soapsuds every day, and after the bathing, wash the affected part with a solution of saltpetre and spirits of turpentine, into a bottle; shake up well before using; apply to the wound three times a day with a feather. And when the wound has assumed a healthful appearance and seems to be healing, this medicines may be discontinued.

Never strike an animal upon the head.

Take care of your plow and your plow will take care of you.

Rank animal manures are not so good in a garden as lime, salt, clay and vegetable manure. Lime corrects acidity, makes mellow and sweet the garden stuff, and is good generally.

Every kind of fruit is increased in size and improved in quality by attendance on early thinning. If done early, the one pear or peech left where two were, will often become as large as both would, and be vastly better.

AGRICULTURAL PUBLICATIONS.

There is nothing more indicative of the advancement made in agricutural matters than the increase in number and the improvement in quality of the agricultural papers of the country, and especially in the South. We have upon our table three Southern agricultural monthlies which rank among the best in the whole country, each not yet a year old.

The Carolina Farmer published in this city, The Reconstructed Farmer, published in Tarboro, and The Southern Agriculturalist, published in Augusta and Savannah, for August, are all filled with the choicest and most practical information for the farmer, and have the appearance of being well sustained. The prejudice to "book-farming," which formerly obtained to a great extent among our farmers, is fast dying out. When good theory is joined with intelligent experience the best results will assuredly follow.—Wilmington Journal.

We saw a negro lad yesterday afternoon, about fourteen years old, sitting at the corner of the iron ware house—Huff's Rink—half nude, and crying most bitterly. We asked him the cause of his trouble, and he replied;

GRAVES' NEW

WAREHOUSE!

PRICE'S LOT

DANVILLE, VA.

WE take pleasure in informing our friends that we have completed our which, for convenience of situation, construction and its fine Sky-light cannot be excelled in this Market.

We have an Excellent Wagon-Yard, where your stock will be perfectly secure.

We have also, a good house for our customers to sleep in.

We have associated with us, Mr. Wm. T. Law, so long and favorably known to the planters around Danville, as to need no recommendation.

We take pleasure in returning our thanks to our friends for the very liberal support we have received, and hope by prompt personal attention to our business, to continue to merit and receive the patronage of our friends and the public.

WM. P. GRAVES,
THOS. R. McDEARMAN,
WM. T. LAW.

CAUTION! WE desire to warn the dealers in, and consumers of snuff generally, that since the war, certain tobacco manufacturers, being unable to find a market for their snuffs, felt themselves obliged to counterfeit the general appearance of our packages, and imitate our Trade Marks, so that a close inspection is necessary to detect the spurious article from the genuine, and others going so far as to assert that "Lorillard's Snuff is no longer made."

In making this publication we desire to warn the public against the impositions practiced upon them; as they are the losers thereby. It will be found upon comparison that Lorillard's Snuff is "far ahead" of all others, being made of the best stock, after an original and secret process known only to ourselves, besides possessing great age, strength and pungency, and is warranted not to contain any dangerous or deleterious substances, which cannot be said of the many worthless articles put on sale by others. The best is the cheapest in the end. A circular will always be mailed on application. In ordering please specify if Salt Snuff (High Toast,) or Fresh Snuff (Extra Scotch) is desired.

TO THOSE SUFFERING WITH PULMONARY DISEASE.

DR. THOMAS H. MILES, continues to treat Thoracic diseases by Topical Medication, or Catheterism of the air passages, conjoined with appropriate general remedies, as practiced by the late Prof. Green, of New York. The success attending this method of treating diseases of the lungs, is unparralleled, and the feasibility of the operation generally conceded. This treatment is almost a specific Bronchitis, Laryngitis, incipient Tuberculosis and Asthma. Numerous testimonials can be adduced from those who have been entirely relieved by the operation. His address is Mount Carmel, Halifax county, Va.

Near Yanceyville, Caswell co., N. C.
April, 1869.

This is to certify that I have been suffering for several years with chronic Bronchitis; attended with all the symptoms of incipient Consumption; during this period, I had frequent hemorrhages from the lungs. I also suffered greatly from enlarged Tonsils. I tried the usual remedies in such cases, but without satisfactory results. I finally concluded to try Dr. Miles' treatment of cauterizing the air passages by injection. I remained under his treatment for six weeks: rejoice to say that I believe my lungs are entirely relieved. I will say that excision of the tonsils added greately to my relief. I most cheerfully recommend this treatment to all persons similarly afflicted.

A MOST WONDERFUL AND SUCCESSFUL INVENTION!

New Method of Washing Clothes without Labor.

THE AUTOMATIC

Clothes Washer and Boiler.

Awarded the highest Testimonial wherever Exhibited.

Rev. M. W. Staples, Inventor and Patentee.

THIS BOILER is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam by the action of fire, are driven up through tubes, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without any rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a Clothes Washer, by those who have used it.

All fabrics, from the finest laces to the bed-blanket can be washed perfectly and with ease and without the aid of the rubbing board. For Flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, roiling and pressing process must necessarily full them more or less.

It is truly a labor and clothes saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing day no longer a terror and a dread to housewives.

The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

The saving in the wear of clothes will soon pay for the outlay.

It is estimated that 200 to 300 gallons of boiled suds pass through the clothes in thirty minutes; this being the longest time required for cleansing a boiler full of clothes.

Hundreds of these Boilers are being sold each week, giving perfect satisfaction.

Every boiler sold guaranteed to do all we claim, or money refunded.

The undersigned, as Agent for J. B. Hunter & Co., of Portsmouth, Va., (who have the right for this State) has commenced the Manufacture of these Boilers and will furnish the citizens of Orange and Chatham, and will, as stated above, take back and refund money for any Boiler which fails to give perfect satisfaction, and do all claimed for it.
